Why does one take up body-building?

There are a lot of reasons. Sometimes adolescents and teenagers start lifting weights to help improve health or build strength for other sports which are of greater interest—such as football. Still other young men lift weights to build strength and muscular size in order to acquire the physical superiority their peers have already achieved through natural growth or exercise. A byproduct is admiration—and a good body has a lot of sex appeal.

Who are the bodybuilders?

Bodybuilders usually belong to one of three groups. First, the young heterosexuals whose desire to build up for sports and sex appeal wanes when life interests change—such as concentrating on college or getting married and settling down. Most of these guys go the way of all straight flesh and trade in their weights for a case of beer when they are in their early 20's—never to exercise seriously again. There is no need to hang on—because muscles have already served their purpose in acquiring peer admiration and winning a mate. The second group comprises men, mostly gay, who admire the body beautiful in others and desire to achieve muscular builds themselves. Their motivation is almost always sex appeal. These men usually get serious about exercising when the sex urge is strong, in the late teens, and exercise is usually kept up throughout life—because the rewards are great; an attractive body enables a man in his 30's, 40's and even 50's to compete on an equal level, as far as sex appeal is concerned, with men in their early 20's—and in fact sometimes gives him the edge over his younger rivals because in addition to physical appeal he also possesses the experience which is necessary for really enjoyable sex. Such men usually train at home or in spa-type gyms, because only light workouts are required to build and maintain muscular but trim bodies. The third group is often referred to as the 'professional' bodybuilders. These aren't necessarily men who make their living from exercise, directly—such as gym operators; they are men whose admiration for really big muscular size in others and in themselves is so intense they are compelled to train hard all their lives. Some men are so dedicated that training interferes with education and vocation—and holding down a job can be impossible. The most important time of all is that which is spent in the professionally-equipped gym for really serious bodybuilders. These are the men who keep entering muscle contests, win or lose. They are the ones who turn to hustling—if for no other reason, because it offers and easy way of making a living without interfering with training. If they are lucky they will get opportunities to model or act in movies. The majority are not lucky—and at best are able to eke out a living by performing in porno movies with men and women or selling themselves to the highest bidders. A few are heterosexual. Some are bisexual, but most are homosexual—and because of the macho image that exists among professional bodybuilders, most of whom believe homosexuality is abnormal, the gay bodybuilder is unable to reveal himself openly, not even to his peers who are experiencing the very

The late multimillionaire John Paul Getty was a regular spectator at the big muscle shows in London. Here, he congratulates one of the big winners in a NABBA contest. 3. Steve Reeves, the handsomest bodybuilder of all-time. 4. The publisher of FLEX presiding over a recent Mr. Fire Island contest. 5, 6 and 7. same feelings. Consequently, there is always much "fag talk" in gyms, chiding those who are open about their gay sex lives and never quite accepting them (certainly, never being seen with them on a social level). What is acceptable is selling oneself to "fags who pay"—and the more spent the more such a guy is accepted by his buddies, out of admiration—because the purchase indicates the value of his muscles. Most bodybuilders get at least $50 a session, and dinner, etc., usually goes with that. Contest winners, especially guys who have big titles, command higher fees—well into the hundreds.

Who are the buyers?

Usually older men who are financially secure. Many such men are prominent and live closeted gay lives. These men, lacking good physiques themselves, admire what they have never been able to achieve in their own lives—and though they wouldn't dare be seen entertaining a typical young hustler, they are almost proud to be seen in the company of a vibrant, macho "Mr. America type" (according to experts we know, some even have that title!) who enjoys flirting with the waitress and putting on a good "public show."

Where are the sellers . . . how can I find them?

First, through the personal ads in this magazine. Outside of that, at a bodybuilding gym—not to be confused (as already explained) with a luxury-type 'health spa'. Check the yellow pages in your city; most big cities have two or three body-building gyms—and a simple telephone call to the places listed in your directory will determine if this is where the big boys train. Go up for a couple of workouts; you'll find that contact is easy. After the second or third time you'll even find out—from talking with the guys, or eavesdropping on phone calls the hunks receive on the pay phone—if the gym owner is in fact moonlighting as a 'madam'. One of the most successful bodybuilding gyms in California is operated by a former porno star who serves the famous bodybuilders who train there as madam—securing johns for them for outside calls. If your town doesn't have a muscle gym then you're likely to find those into serious weight-training at the YMCA. But making contact at the Y usually takes more time—because the crowds are thinner and are apt to be well known in town. Moreover, a moral sense usually pervades most Y operations—so the head instructor is likely to think of himself as Mother Superior in charge of keeping the brood in the shadow of the cross.

Are bodybuilders good sex?

Bodybuilders are like all other men; some are good, and some are bad. However, they are likely to be either very good or very bad. That is to say, you will encounter those whose basic personality demands praise—and such men are likely to make a conscious effort to please by being very good. You are more likely to encounter the guy who thrives on admiration and has an inflated ego—who has come to believe that just touching him gives indescribable pleasure. He will lie back and be served—and if you like to serve and express your admiration, particularly in words, the session will probably be highly successful. Such egocentric men will pose for you and be as turned on as you are by what you see, by what they hear. Sometimes great strength permits a good performer to accomplish maneuvers in bed not possible by most men—and that can add to a session.

Do bodybuilders like 'oiling-up' for sex?

Not necessarily. In fact, it's usually the john who likes oiling his man up—because that whole posing scene turns him on. The muscleman, who is used to oiling-up in contests (it gives sheen and depth to muscles being posed under stage lights), thinks nothing of having oil put on. He's used to the feel and might even enjoy it.

Why are most bodybuilders hairless?

Actually, they aren't. Hair, especially when it is thick, hides muscular definition—so it is shaved before posing in a contest. Many guys keep their bodies shaved all the time—much the same as women keep the legs hairless. The muscles look better—when posing on the stage, in the gym and for pictures in the muscle magazines, and for a john.

Where are muscle contests held, and when?

They are held throughout the world, throughout the year. On the east coast an organization known as the World Body Building Guild operates big contests in the spring (usually May) and fall (usually September) in New York City. Contests are held regularly in southern California, which is where most bodybuilders are. A coveted contest (Mr. Universe) is held in London every September (John Paul Getty, the late multimillionaire, used to be a regular spectator, and was often called on to present a trophy!). Start buying muscle magazines such as Muscle Training Illustrated from your local newsstand regularly (it comes out every 6 weeks) and you'll not only find out about the musclemen and how they train, but also about contests and where they're held—so that you may attend.

Has one famous bodybuilder stood out above all others?

Yes. Steve Reeves, of "Hercules" fame. He was the handsomest, classic in looks in face and body. Even today young bodybuilders admire him (that is to say, pictures of him—as he appeared in his peak in the late 1940's and early 50's). He has inspired more young men to train than any other bodybuilder—including those who have been made famous in the handful of popular movies that have been released in the last couple of years. Arnold Schwarzenegger, because of his appearances in such movies as "Pumping Iron," and because of the number of people his TV appearances have reached, is probably the best known.

Please outline a good exercise program for a guy who wants to build a trim but muscular body and maintain it.

First, you'll need some basic exercise equipment—either a pair of dumbbells, preferably the kind that can be adjusted (made heavier by adding iron plates), weighing 15 to 25 pounds each, or an adjustable barbell which can be made as heavy as 75 pounds. Most sporting goods stores carry these items, or—if you want the kind of equipment that bodybuilders use—pick up a copy of Muscle Training Illustrated magazine at your local newsstand and order what you need by mail. (You'll also be able to purchase such useful items as a doorway chinning bar through the magazine.) The program is designed to work all your muscles so that development will be symmetrical and aesthetic. Do the following exercises in the order given. STANDING PRESSES: Holding a barbell behind the neck as shown, or using a pair of dumbbells with palms facing in, slowly press overhead until arms are fully extended, lower slowly, and repeat. This one is for the shoulders and lower neck muscles. CURLS: For the biceps. Grip a barbell as shown, or use a pair of dumbbells instead, and slowly bend at the elbows and "curl" the bar forward and up until it almost touches your chin. Lower and repeat. If you use dumbbells you can alternate curls; that is, curl one side, and as you lower the weight begin to raise the other one. TRICEPS PRESSES: This builds the backside of the upper arms. Hold a dumbbell as shown, behind the head. Keep your upper arm fixed as shown (hold in place with your free hand if necessary), and slowly raise the weight by bending at the elbow only, until it is overhead. Lower slowly and repeat. Then work the other arm. If you use a barbell, grip the bar behind your neck with palms facing down. Keep the upper arms fixed and raise the weight in the same manner. BENCH PRESSES: Lie flat on a bench (professional exercise benches are available from the same sources already given)—of the same type that's used for pianos; or fashion one from two or three strong wooden boxes. The bench should be narrow enough to permit you to drop your elbows below the level of your chest when you place the bar across it. Palms forward, either with a barbell or dumbbells. Slowly exhale and push the weight up, away from you until arms are straight. Lower and repeat; inhale as the weight comes down. This exercise builds the pectorals (fleshy chest muscles) and helps expand the rib-cage for greater chest girth. CHINS BEHIND THE NECK: Use a doorway chinning bar or fashion one that will serve your purpose. It must be positioned high enough so that when you raise your feet behind you a few inches you will be suspended. Grip the bar with palms facing forward, hands placed as wide apart as possible. Slowly pull yourself up until the back of your neck almost touches the bar. Lower slowly and repeat. This works the upper back—giving it size to help assure a V-taper in your torso. SITUPS: Perform them flat on the floor, with your feet secured under a piece of furniture for leverage, or on a professional abdominal board. Hands behind head, slowly sit up and bring your head forward to your knees. Return to starting position and repeat. Exhale as you rise, inhale as you go back. Start with bent knees until your midsection gets stronger; then, keep the legs straight. When that becomes easy, place weights behind the head for resistance. SQUATS: Place a barbell across the shoulders as shown, or hold dumbbells at the shoulders or at your sides. Squat down by bending the knees. Rise and repeat. Keep the feet about 12'' apart. If you lack balance it helps to place the heels on a 2''-thick block of wood. The exercise develops the thighs and lung power. HEEL RAISES: Simply stand erect, or bend forward as shown, and slowly rise up on your toes by lifting your heels as far up as possible. When the exercise gets easy add resistance by holding a barbell across the shoulders, or dumbbells at the side, or by having a buddy sit across your lower back/hips. Professional Calf Machines are sold for the same purpose, available through MTI. For variety, and in order to attack the calves from all sides, perform the exercise with toes forward, out, and in, from time to time. In the beginning (the first couple of weeks) do 1 set (a unit without interruption) of 12 repetitions for each exercise (the midsection and calves can be worked longer if desired). Then, add 1 set for each exercise for the next 2 weeks, and go up to 3 sets thereafter. Increase resistance by adding weight, as already explained. Exercise every other day, preferably in the morning. Rest only a minute between sets, and about 3 minutes between exercises.

What do I need to know in order to control my bodyweight?

A reasonably accurate method of determining how much food is required to maintain an ideal bodyweight (after you decide what is ideal for you—depending on general health and what is pleasing to the eye) is to multiply that weight by the figure 15, which gives you the total number of daily calories (energy units provided by foods) you must consume. Under or over this figure, for each 3600 you eat or don't eat—spread out over days, weeks, or months—you will gain or lose a pound. Naturally, if at any particular time you exercise unusually hard you will probably consume additional calories and need to eat more. (Calorie counters in booklet form are sold at most health food stores for about 50¢.) Generally speaking, however, the figure 15 works for almost everybody. Eat lots of proteins (meat, fish, fowl, eggs, dairy products, milk), and reasonable amounts of carbohydrates (such as baked goods, vegetables, sweets, etc.), as well as limited amounts of fats (butter, mayonnaise, oils, etc.). Take a good one-a-day vitamin, as well as other vitamin supplements that you believe are beneficial to your health and well-being. And get a reasonable amount of rest every night. The less liquor you consume or drugs taken—the better you health will be.

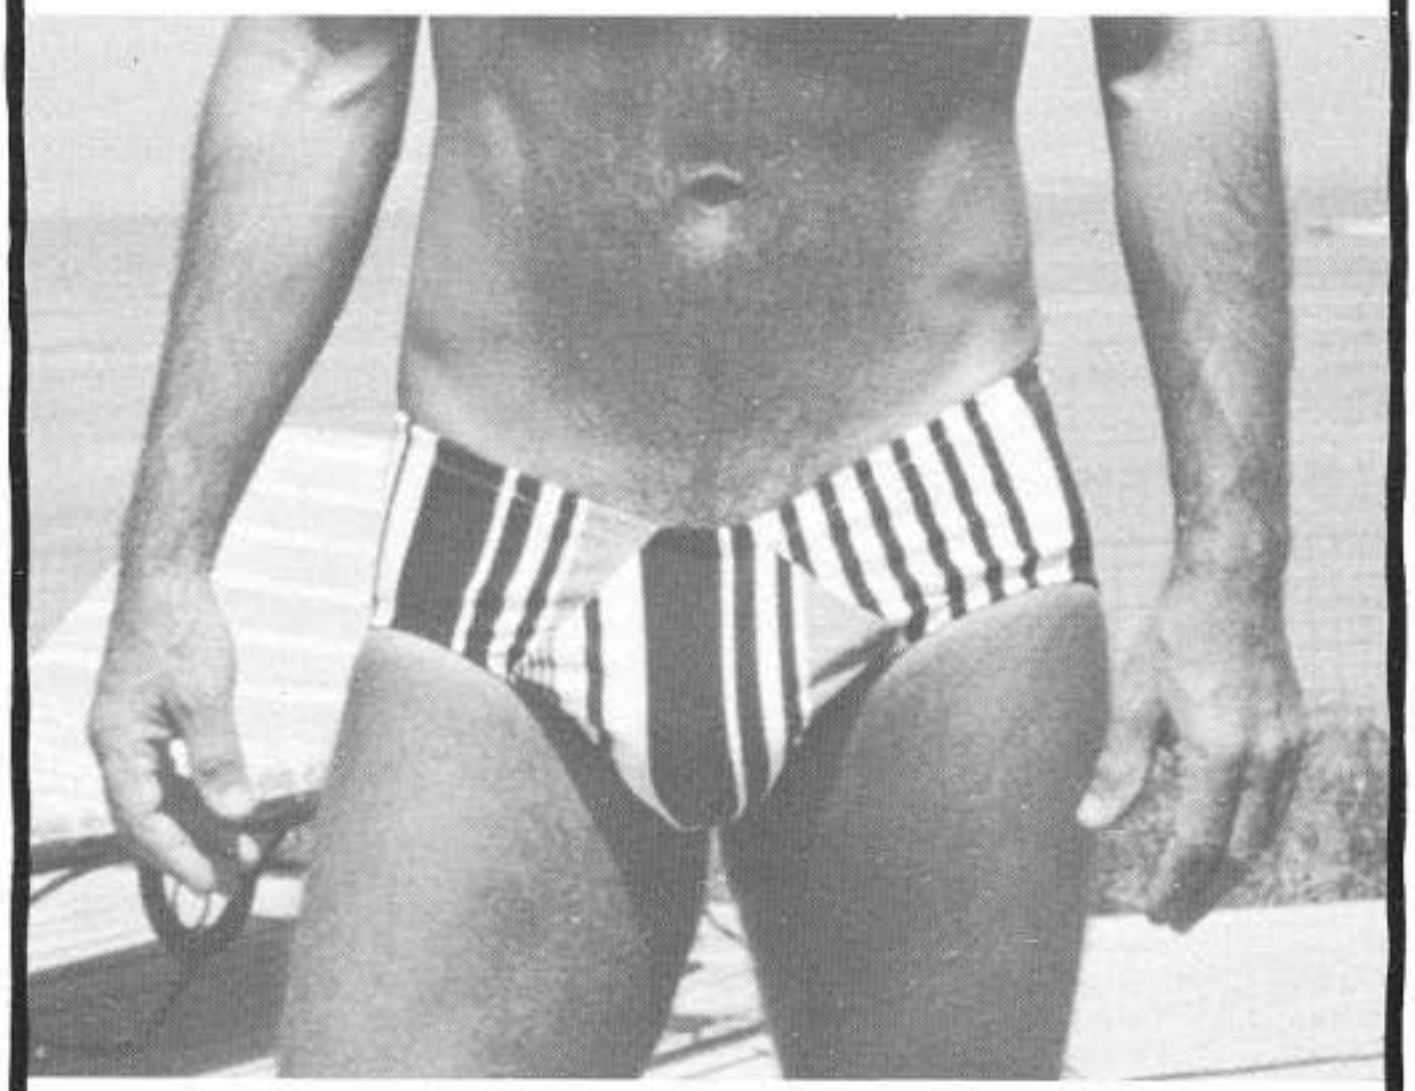
Only $7.50

2 FOR $14.00! 3 FOR $20.00!



THE GREEK BOY is made of fine terry cloth that clings without pulling. The front is cut low, utilizing a codpiece-like panel to create a U-drop, thereby accentuating the crotch . . . and the seat is cut FULL, so unlike most bikinis and flimsy swimsuits the seams fall where they should and don't cut across the middle of your ass. We carry STRIPES ONLY (no solid colors). Some stripes are broad, some thin, some muted—all colorful on a background of white. When you order INDICATE YOUR FAVORITE COLORS and we will send the stripe combination that includes the color(s) you want. If you order more than one GREEK BOY we will not duplicate the design. Give your correct size (using your underwear as a guide)—SMALL, 28-30; MEDIUM, 32-34; LARGE, 36-38. Provide true size since swimsuits are a sanitary item and are not returnable. Your Passport To Gay Adventure In A Compact Booklet Small Enough To Fit In Your Pocket!

THE MOST ACCURATE GAY TRAVEL DIRECTORY IN THE WORLD

Nearly all existing gay travel directories are "rip-offs" of guides published years ago—providing information which is no longer valid. The editors of our gay travel magazine span the world—constantly gathering information for Ciao! They have prepared our 1978 gay travel directory—which we call "Private Stock." It contains nearly 4,000 accurate and up-to-date names and addresses of gay establishments and meeting places everywhere in the world—conveniently arranged by country and city in alphabetical order. By utilizing a concise system of "keys" we are able to present detailed information about each listing; the keys are so arranged that you can instantly interpret them and learn everything you need to know—whether a place is entirely gay, what you will encounter—young guys, old guys, sex, no booze, entertainment, food, lesbians, hustlers, muggers, cops, even dangerous animals (in jungle meat-racks!). And we dare to bare it all—including johns on college campuses, in subways and department stores that swing. By using small type which is easy to read we are able to cram all this valuable information in a compact booklet which is securely stapled together in magazine form and small enough (3x5) to fit in your shirt pocket. Its cover is durable and leather-grained with absolutely no "tell-tale" printing so that discreet travelers can use it anywhere. Plus other features such as where to look for sex in college towns, and how much hustlers are paid—and how to handle them. Published annually—"Private Stock" is the only gay travel directory you need . . . the only one you will ever want. It is your personal address book for hot times! Sent via certified 1st class.

GOOD HEALTH & SEXUAL VIGOR CAN BE YOURS

Vitamins are substances which are required by the body if it is to function properly. They are normally provided by foods, but not always in sufficient quantities. This is particularly true of processed foods which have been depleted of their vitamin content.

When extraordinary demands tax the body its nutrients are drained and must be replenished. We do this through proper nutrition; by eating good foods and supplementing our meals with vitamins and minerals. Those of us who have sex every day are especially concerned about the ability to perform successfully and safeguard against impotency—a condition which may be aggravated when certain nutrients are lacking . . . particularly those vitamins associated with sexual potency.

First and foremost the sexually-active adult should take a powerful multi-vitamin & mineral tablet daily for his general well being. During times of stress, and particularly the type which is associated with sex, the body requires more energy and therefore demands additional B vitamins to assist in the metabolic processes. Vitamin E is associated with sexual prowess and is consumed by thousands of sexually-active people who attribute their drive in great part to this vitamin. Bee pollen is gathered from the bee colonies and unsprayed flower fields in Southern Europe—where it is believed that bee pollen has aphrodisiacal properties. Korean Ginseng, particularly highest quality "heaven grade" processed from roots that are at least six years old, has for thousands of years been considered a wondrous rejuvenator and reactivator of the sexual organs in the Orient.

With this knowledge we have combined the highest-quality natural food supplements available for sexually-active adults. Three Sex Combos are available to meet the most discriminating requirements—and only you will know their value after you have added them to your diet. And like hundreds of others now taking Sex Combos we believe you too will find a new and livelier sexual awareness in your life.

The components may be purchased separately, but greater savings are realized when they are bought as Sex Combo packages.
